BHS Statement on Harassment

The Barbershop Harmony Society does not condone harassing or threatening behavior toward any individual.

As noted in the BHS Code of Ethics, "We shall exhibit a spirit of good fellowship toward all members and strive to resolve any conflicts with civility and respect."

Whether communicating in a BHS channel, in a public or private social media setting, or by sending messages directly, people should always treat each other with dignity, while acknowledging their differences.

BHS cannot — and should not—monitor every private communication or intervene in every setting. While BHS cannot control non-members' actions, BHS members have agreed and should exhibit qualities that adhere to our core values and statements of affirmation.

Person-to-person social media forums are subject to moderation by their owners and by providers' terms of service. We encourage all forums to create and support harmony in a healthy and productive manner.

Harassing or threatening behavior may also be subject to legal or criminal action depending on jurisdiction. Please notify local authorities immediately if you ever feel threatened or unsafe.

INTRO TO BARBERSHOP

Learning and growing as a Barbershopper

Anyone can sing a barbershop-style arrangement and sound pretty good. But attaining the peak look and ring, the dazzle — that's an art which, like any worthwhile pursuit, can be mastered through a combination of study, coaching and mentorship.

While on the one hand we count in our ranks many professional musicians and teachers, it's something of a point of pride that most members have careers other than music. BHS thrives on a train-the-trainer model, in which an extensive network of directors, coaches and judges help every singer unlock their potential. The Barbershop Harmony Society supports these through centralized education events like Harmony University, online education videos, music publications and learning tracks, and financial support for directors wishing to extend their education.
